Thailand

Surakarta is about beating all the opposing pawns, but you can only do this if you have at least made a circle run. Roundabout, also known as Surakarta is a great abstract strategy game. The board has a unique circular track layout that loops around the square (6x6) corners of the playing surface. An opposing token can only be taken by moving your token around one of the loops and ending directly on the spot of your opponent. Surakarta is fun and easy to learn, but it is also a complex game that requires strategic thinking in every step of the game. Description

Surakarta is about beating all the opposing pawns, but you can only do this if you have at least made a circle run. Only those who have previously made such a change of course may strike. At the beginning of the game, the 12 game pieces are on outer sides. You can move a field with your character, even diagonally, but then you must not hit. Striking is always done when a circle is passed through. You may then have an arbitrary long access and exit path (if no own or opposing stones stand in the way). The own stone is taken next to the beating stone statue and this then taken away. You can only drive through circles if you hit them afterwards. The game ends as soon as a player no longer owns any pieces.
